Texas, unlike other many other states, gained 13,500 private sector jobs in October, adding to the more than 200,000 private sector jobs created since the start of 2011.

The Texas Workforce Commission reported Friday that the Lone Star State has seen positive annual job growth for the past 18 months.

In the Dallas-Fort Worth-Arlington, the estimated civilian labor force in October dropped to around 3.274 million compared to the September estimate of around 3.285 million.

Across the state, the mining and logging industry added an estimated 4,500 jobs in October and has grown by more than 20 percent in the past year. The trade, transportation and utilities industries also added an estimated 6,500 jobs in October.

In addition to job growth, the state's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate was down to 8.4 percent in October. In September, the unemployment rate was 8.5 percent.

The unemployment rate for the Dallas-Fort Worth-Arlington area was 8 percent, down from 8.3 percent in September.

The national unemployment rate was 9 percent in October.
